

Surrounded a two-finger salute to the president-defect

Completed in 2009, the Trump International Hotel & Tower is situated along the Chicago River. At the very start of Donalds Trump's presidency in 2016, many residents of Chicago have stood in front of the tower to display their frustrations with the president. Protests, viral middle finger photo trends and other demonstrations have even led to national guards surrounding the building. In an effort to commemorate the controversial administration, this multi-story monument serves to embody the feelings cast by many Chicago residents. The monument is comprised of two hands mirrored on either side of the river directly facing the Trump tower and offers views away from the glass skyscraper. The aerial image on the top left captures both structures across the river, while the image on the top right is a perspective view from a boat on the Chicago River.
